this season as the period of inner resurgence, and in the inner world of our spirits we know that life is eternal. Life is always at the maximum of springtime: as we leave our bodies, dropping them to go into God's world again, we shed the years and come back to a manifestation of life and consciousness that is so evident in this springtime.

It is quite noticeable that there is a decided change around May first between the powers that we have been governed by and acted upon and those that will now be influencing us. For half of the year we are under those great intelligences and festivals that have everything to do with man's regeneration. And then for another six months we are under an entirely different order. It is a way of indirect attunement to the Everlasting Maker and Creator. Maytime ushers in the vernal festival. The intelligences of nature shine out their rays of beneficence and give to the earth their wonderful rituals, their great festivals, and their initiations.

All who are awake and who are in some way sensitive are
